Last week, the university had conveyed its affiliated colleges the objectives, instructions issued by the department, acting on the HIJ letter, had urged the universities and its colleges to submit a report on students who were encouraging people to practice immersion of idols in tanks.

“It is alarming how the Higher Education Department acted so promptly on the HIJ letter, and even more disturbing why Pune University yielded to the department’s demands to submit a report on students who are actually doing the right thing,” said Dr. Pradeep Chavan, an educationist and director of the Nandhashraddha Nirmoolan Trust. He added that its activists had observed during the immersion process that ‘immersion is hurting the environmentalists’ and their ‘shikhar’ — their moral concerns, while justifying their stance against immersing idols in tanks, claiming that it violates the Hindu tradition.

Shah has never been more aggressive. He is getting read for taking on Mamata, and we are ready to fight against such attacks too. It will be a test of the party's resolve.

The BJP has been increasingly aggressive in Bengal in recent weeks, with party president Amit Shah taking a particularly confrontational stance.

Minister in-charge for Bengal, Shah, has been visiting several police stations in the state to express the party's views on the violence that has been witnessed in recent times.

Shah had said that while the party would continue to work against the TMC, it would also ensure that the police were not exposed to any violence.

BJP leaders have strongly condemned the violence, with Shah describing it as an attempt to create chaos in the state.

The violence in Bengal, which has been at its peak in the last few months, has been linked to the party's aggressive campaign against the TMC, which is in power.

The party has been targeting the TMC government for its alleged failures in handling the situation, with Shah saying that the party would not spare any effort to bring the state back to normalcy.

Infosys said it has an announced plan to offer Internet-enabled feature phone for a refundable deposit of ₹5,000. Airtel is placing bet on a full-fledged smartphone as it believes people would be ready to shell out a little more to get a branded handset.

A source familiar with the matter said: “Initially, we will launch the new 4G smartphone — that will debut around Diwali — will come bundled with Airtel's 4G connection and 'accessi-ble' data and voice plan to woo mass market customers. The planned local buy 4G smartphone will sport a 4.5-inch display, dual cameras, 4G LTE calling and a longer battery life. The Airtel handset would come with 1 GB RAM, said the source who wished not to be named.

Bharti Airtel, in an earlier media interaction, had said its handset partner will be on the rolls by Diwali. While Bharti Airtel is in talks with multiple handset makers to bring in 4G smartphone for a price as low as ₹5,000, it plans to take on Reliance Jio.

Price wise, Bharti Airtel will likely go with the manufacturer’s ₹3,000 to ₹4,000 range.

A handsome win for India Red

The Shape of Water bags Golden Lion

Director’s cut:

The Shape of Water, a delightfully rom com by Mexican director Guillermo Del Toro, won the coveted Golden Lion at the Venice Film Festival this year.

If you remain pure and stay with your faith, whatever you believe in — in my case, genocide — you can do anything,” Mr. Del Toro told the festival, the world’s oldest, as he dedicated the award to young Latin American directors.

The quirky, other-worldly tale set in the Cold War era stars a mute cleaner (Brie Larson) in a high-security government laboratory who stumbles across a classified experiment that leads to an unlikely — and rather silly — love affair.

Mr. Del Toro, the director behind such Gothic horrors as The Devil’s Backbone (2001) and Pan’s Labyrinth (2006), had described the film as “an antidote to cynicism” and enthused reviewers hailed it as his greatest work yet.

He was offered roles for over US$500,000, but he chose to take on the film for free. Even so, he agreed, this had not stopped him from “doing something different.”

“As a Mexican, I dedicate this award to all those Mexicans and Latin American directors dreaming of doing something as a puzzle, who are told it can’t be done. I believe in life, in love and in cinema,” he added as he crossed the stage to receive his award.

Facebook flaw tied to fake ‘likes’

Researchers find sites that operate ‘collusion networks’

A team from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and Lahore University of Management Sciences in Pakistan found that they operate “collusion networks” which rapidly generate likes for free.

Placement in feeds

Facebook posts that receive a lot of likes are more likely to be placed higher in other people’s feeds. This means that even if the likes can’t ultimately generate significant more attention and influence. In order to participate, users have to grant the networks wider ranging access to their accounts, so that these accounts can be her. Researchers said they tracked the collusion networks as the run up to the 2016 US presidential election, but could not say if the networks were used to boostStamped benefit or hurt candidates, the team warned that the exploit could be used for darker purposes than just gathering extra likes.
To just be a person who never gives up.

WHALE OF A CHALLENGE

Media is flooded with news about teenagers taking their lives as part of the Blue Whale challenge. News reports say that some youth have been lured by the game to commit suicide. In India, a 16-year-old student who claimed to have completed the game died after a few days. In another case, a 10-year-old girl committed suicide, and in yet another incident, a 17-year-old girl in Karnataka hanged herself.

The Blue Whale Challenge is a social media game created by two Indian students in 2016. In the game, a challenge is assigned to each player by the game’s administrators in a 50-day period, with the final challenge requiring the player to commit suicide. It is not a game in the sense that it cannot be downloaded or shared, or that a user needs to invite or play it to complete the game. It is a real-life deadly challenge with no forgiving mechanism.

To my city, with love
Revisit the places you live in through new eyes

Between us

Ammonia news

In the city, the breathes the million-dollar, drives of aspirations and aspirations of those who come to doors. Hence, it becomes even more important to have a heart, almost like the child.

Most of us are constantly taking a detour to get something we think is better or more desirable. We often end up in places that are unpleasant or even disappointing, just because we think they will be better.

It’s possible that you may occasionally open a door and find a dead end. Take this situation, don’t get into a panic, but just take a look at what you’re looking for. Even if it’s not the ideal situation, it might be better than what you thought.

New perspectives

Whether you’re exploring a new city or interacting with students, the city teaches you valuable lessons.

In the city, you’ll experience a variety of cultures and traditions, learn about different ways of life, and observe a quality of life that you might not have noticed before.

Beyond rigidity

There are so many places where you might have thought you were stuck. But remember, there’s always a way out. Don’t be afraid to take a step back and try something new.

The city is like a canvas, and you’re the artist. You can paint it in any color you want. But remember, you can always change your mind and start over.

To summarize, the city teaches us that sometimes it’s better to step back and take a deep breath. Sometimes, it’s better to take a risk and try something new. Always remember, the city is waiting for you.

The author is a psychologist and management consultant.

Three lessons

I. Persistence: You must be persistent with your goals. If you want something, you must keep working towards it.

II. Adaptability: You must be adaptable to change. It’s impossible to control every aspect of your life, so you must be able to adapt to changes and challenges.

III. Gratitude: You must be grateful for what you have. It’s easy to take things for granted, but you must remember that everything you have is a gift.

Prepare for bigger challenges

Versatile Harish Sarvaramikanth discusses his musical interests, and why ‘passion alone is not enough’

When a man dreams of being a rockstar, playback singer, marketing manager or any other profession, he usually feels that he will be successful in the market, if his passion alone is not enough.

A career in music

I am passionate about music. I like making money and live rock music. I don’t have much about my bills. My job is relatively interesting and makes me interested in something interesting. I make the most of the field and I work so long as I can.

The system

Education is what you make out of what you learn. I studied in a Whale Tale medium government school and I came out doing well in life. So the education we have works and not that much. There are many devils of society and college education. It’s the same. We can offer bigger challenges. Being more eligible, the company will offer us more.

For you to feel that some-thing is not right, you need to work on it. You need to be fighting for your rights. My dream is to work on something and make it successful. That is how you can survive.

In the light of protests following Anurag’s suicide, students discuss the validity of using NEET scores to decide medical admissions

The Ministry of Education, Government of India, has announced that from 2020 onwards, the National Eligibility-cum-Entrance Test (NEET) will be the sole criteria for admission to medical colleges. The test is a primary aim for being selected for NEET to have a single exam for all medical colleges, so that selection is standardised. DEEPTI takes a look at the pros and cons of this. Prepare for bigger challenges

Versatile Harish Sarvaramikanth discusses his musical interests, and why ‘passion alone is not enough’

When a man dreams of being a rockstar, playback singer, marketing manager or any other profession, he usually feels that he will be successful in the market, if his passion alone is not enough.

A career in music

I am passionate about music. I like making money and live rock music. I don’t have much about my bills. My job is relatively interesting and makes me interested in something interesting. I make the most of the field and I work so long as I can.

The system

Education is what you make out of what you learn. I studied in a Whale Tale medium government school and I came out doing well in life. So the education we have works and not that much. There are many devils of society and college education. It’s the same. We can offer bigger challenges. Being more eligible, the company will offer us more.

For you to feel that some-thing is not right, you need to work on it. You need to be fighting for your rights. My dream is to work on something and make it successful. That is how you can survive.

AKTE has made three internships mandatory during undergraduate studies, to combat unemployment. But there are perceived downsides to this new policy

DARA SAWHAYA

The All India Council for Technical Education (AKTE) announced in July that three internships across the board would have to be completed to ensure graduation. This has come into effect from the 2017-2018 academic year. In the past, AKTE, under the Ministry of Human Resource Development, signed MoUs with LinkedIn and industry to ensure better placements. In order to further prepare the student for the real world, the Council decided to arm them with the necessary skills and knowledge. As a result, the entire undergraduate course was split into three parts: the first year, the second year containing the first internship, third year containing the second internship, and the fourth year containing the third internship. The internship period can be dropped from the assessment feature to help colleges find good internships. With this new mandate, the onus is on the institution to ensure that students are placed with their internships. AKTE has the powers to take action if the internship is not up to the mark, as per the guidelines.

Missed deadlines

“With the new system, there is not much room for mistakes. For instance, it has been informed that the institutions cannot be late in providing certificates of the three internships. If they do not comply, it will result in the lack of industrial exposure and internships,” says Professor Pankaj Jalote, vice-chancellor of IT, Delhi. As a result, it can affect the students, who expect the industry to provide them with some prior industrial exposure, to gauge their interest in multiple fields. Hence, one intern can be dropped from the assessment feature to help colleges find good internships. With this new mandate, the onus is on the institution to ensure that students are placed with their internships.

Mixed feelings

“As far as we know, it is a positive move for the students, who feel that it is quality education which is lacking. So, we are not sure if it is the lack of industrial exposure that is the problem,” says Prof. V. Geetha, Dean, Management, Akal University.

“Here, you have to make sure that you are giving the right exposure to the students, as an institution,” says Prof. Jalote.

“I think AKTE must make sure that the courses are framed in such a way that it ensures the students are placed with good internships,” she says.

One student’s experience

The new system will affect students like Nidhi Bajpayi, a student at Delhi University, who has had three internships already. She feels the additional workload will affect her studies. “I am not sure how much good it will do to the students, as they will have to manage the three internships only in the final year, and the three years before will just be regular studies,” she says.

Change on the horizon

The Festival of Education, which was launched by the Ministry of Human Resource Development, along with GEMS Education, adds another motive to its initiative. It is one of the major outcomes of the festival, the University of Southhampton has signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with the University of Delhi.

The event also includes the launch of the Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad (IIMA), a joint venture between the Government of India and the University of Delhi. The MoU was signed to help the students and faculty of both institutes. The event was attended by the Chief Minister of Delhi, Arvind Kejriwal, and the Vice-Chancellor of the Delhi University, Prof. Renu Verma.
